1. Writing Guide

1.	Journal of Ushuluddin invites scholars and experts in the field of Islamic Studies, especially those related to the focus and scope of the Journal of Ushuluddin.
2.	The articles submitted are original works, have never been published, and are not being reviewed by the other journals.
3.	Manuscripts are typed in Microsoft Word format, Times New Roman font, 12 pt font, one and a half spaces, A4 paper size, and writing length ranges from 15 to 25 pages. Manuscripts can be sent via email jurnal.usnuluddin@uin-suska.ac.id
4.	Articles are written in Indonesian or in English. Below the article title, the author's name and author's members (if any), the address of the author's institution, and the author's email address are listed. If the author consists of more than one person, it is enough to include the email address of the main author. If the authors' institutions are different, all the addresses of the authors' institutions are included.
5.	Articles must be occupied with an abstract of 150 to 200 words in length in English and Indonesian, and keywords of 3 to 5 words. Abstracts for articles originating from research reports contain the objectives, methods, and findings of the study.
6.	Articles submitted must contribute something new in the field of Ushuluddin. The systematics of writing articles originating from the library research are as follows: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Introduction: Explains the background of the need to discuss the topic being studied. • Discussion on the main theme of the writing: describes the main theme of the study which is stated in the form of sub-sections or sub-titles. This section also contains the author's analysis of the main themes. • Conclusion: presents the main findings of the study. • References: the bibliography is made regularly and alphabetically. Every reference in the footnote must be listed in the bibliography. While the articles that come from the field research with the systematics of writing are as follows: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Introduction: explains the theoretical background, related studies, and the purpose of conducting the study. • Method: describes how the study was carried out, including the type of research, the methods used, the data collection techniques, the data analysis techniques, and other things deemed necessary. • Findings and Discussions: the study findings must be clear. The discussion is an exploration of the importance of these findings, and also conducts discussions with various other research findings in a similar study. • Conclusion: presents the main findings of the study. • References: the bibliography is made regularly and alphabetically. Every reference in the footnote must be listed in the bibliography.

7. Footnotes and References are made in the Turabian style

- The bibliography must contain at least 80% of the main sources, which is from scientific journal articles, articles from research books, etc.
- The bibliography is a scientific publication of the last 10 years, except for references related to the Turat Books.

Example of writing a footnote:

SOURCE TYPE	FOOTNOTES WRITING FORMAT
(1) Book written by an author	¹ Neil Sheehan, A Bright Shining Lie: John Paul Vann and America in Vietnam (New York: Random House, 1988), 425.
(2) Book written by two authors	² John E. Schwarz dan Thomas J. Volgy, The Forgotten American (New York: Norton, 1992), 42.
(3) Book written by three authors	³ Kate Darian-Smith, Kay Schaffer, dan R. Poignant, Captured Lives: Australian Captivity Narratives (London: Menzies Centre for Australian Studies Monograph, University of London, 1993), 19.
(4) Book written by more than 4 authors	⁴ S. Alper et al., Inclusion: Are We Abandoning or Helping Students? (Thousand Oaks, CA: Corwin Press, 1995), 30. Originally this book is written by 4 authors; S. Alper, Schloss, P. J., Etscheidt, S. K., dan Macfarlane, C. A., Inclusion: Are We Abandoning or Helping Students? (Thousand Oaks, CA: Corwin Press, 1995).
(5) Book more than 1 edition	⁵ Syed Muhammad Naquib al-Attas, Islam and Secularism , second edition (Kuala Lumpur: ISTAC, 1993), 25. If an article is published in more than one edition, the editions need to be included because it is possible that the pages in one edition are different from other editions.
(6) Book edited or translated	⁶ Ibn Khaldūn, Muqaddimat Ibn Khaldūn , ed. ‘Alī ‘Abd al-Wāḥid Waḥfī (Kairo: Dār al-Ma‘ārif, 1957), 85. ⁷ Christian Cherfils, Napolean and Islam: From French and Arab Documents , translated from French by James Gibb-Stuart (Kuala Lumpur: Utusan Publications, 2000), 69.

(ed.), Beyond Appearance: A New Look at Adolescent Girls (Washington, DC:

	American Psychological Association, 1999). In English the word “ed.” is the abbreviation for “editor” (person who edits) and “eds.” for “editors” (people who edit). This means the letter “s” at the end of the word “eds.” indicates that it is a plural word. In Indonesian, the plural word is indicated by writing the same word twice, not by adding the letter “s”. For example, the word “pena” (single word) and “pena-pena” (plural word), not “penas”. However, because of its length, it is sufficient to write “(ed.)”, Not “(eds.)” For editors, as it is in English.

10. Guidelines for Transliteration of Arabic letters to Latin:

HURUF			HURUF
ARAB		LATIN	ARAB		LATIN
ء	=	'	ص	=	ṣ
ب	=	b	ض	=	ḍ / ḏ
ت	=	t	ط	=	ṭ / ṭ̣
ث	=	ts	ظ	=	ẓ / ẓ̣
ج	=	j	ع	=	‘
ح	=	ḥ / ħ	غ	=	gh
خ	=	kh	ف	=	f
د	=	d	ق	=	q
ذ	=	dz	ك	=	k
ر	=	r	ل	=	l
ز	=	z	م	=	m
س	=	s	ن	=	n
ش	=	sy	هـ	=	h

Notice the difference between the transliteration of the letters hamzaḥ and ‘ayn above, which is the apostrophe that faces to the left (‘) for the letter hamzah, and the comma above facing to the right (,) for the letter ‘ayn . For Arabic transliteration, the letter stopped wāw (sukūn) is written with the letter “w” (not “u”), while the letter stopped yā (sukūn) with “y” (not “i”).

12.	The editor has the right to reject article manuscripts that do not match the focus, scope, and writing style of the Ushuluddin Journal.
